About this Statement

This Modern Slavery Statement (Statement) is made on behalf of the reporting entity MUFG Pension & Market Services Holdings Pty Ltd ABN: 27 120 964 098 ('MPMS' or 'the Group') pursuant to the Australian Modern Slavery Act 2018 (the Australian Act) and the United Kingdom Modern Slavery Act 2015 (the UK Act).

The Statement covers all Controlled Entities across the Group for the purpose of reporting requirements for section 16 of the Australian Act and addresses the reporting requirements for section 54 of the UK Act. It has been prepared as a joint statement.

This statement discloses MPMS' progress towards identifying and addressing modern slavery risks within its business operations and supply chain during the 12 months from 1 January-31 December 2025 ('reporting period') and analyses the effectiveness of actions taken. This is our sixth Statement under the Australian Act and eighth Statement under the UK Act.

1. Introduction

Our sustainability strategy

MUFG Pension & Market Services (MPMS) is a responsible business committed to building a sustainable future for our people, clients, and the communities in which we operate. Our sustainability strategy incorporates global focus areas in environment, social and governance (ESG) and aims to align with the Paris Agreement and five of the UN Sustainable Development Goals.

We recognise that we have a responsibility to respect human rights in our operations and supply chain, as well as opportunities to support and advance human rights within our sphere of influence. Our prioritisation of human rights and modern slavery is reflected in our sustainability strategy under the community and social wellbeing pillar, guiding our day-to-day operations and approach to identifying, monitoring and managing modern slavery risks.

While modern slavery is a global and complex problem, and many of the risks and factors contributing to modern slavery extend far beyond the control and reach of any one entity, MPMS has a role to play as a large company with a global supply chain and workforce.

Across our global business, we aim to operate responsibly and ethically, and we are committed to implementing policies and practices to support and strengthen human rights protections.

We seek to monitor, assess and mitigate human rights and modern slavery risks in our business across all jurisdictions in which we operate. We are also committed to providing an inclusive environment that supports the health, safety and wellbeing of our people, and we expect our suppliers to do the same.

2. Respecting human rights

MPMS is committed to protecting and promoting human rights within our own business operations, supply chain, and sphere of influence. While modern slavery is one of the most significant areas of human rights risk for our business, we seek to manage it within a broader human rights framework, as set out in our Human Rights Policy.

2.1 Principles for human rights

MPMS is guided by the following international principles for human rights:

- Universal Declaration of Human Rights
- Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work (International Labour Organization or ILO)
- UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGPs)

While national governments are primarily responsible for protecting the human rights of their citizens, MPMS supports and respects internationally recognised human rights standards, regardless of whether the national legislation of the relevant country contains such protections or not. In countries where local legislation conflicts with internationally recognised human rights standards, we seek to respect international standards.

2.2 Protecting human rights in our operations and supply chain

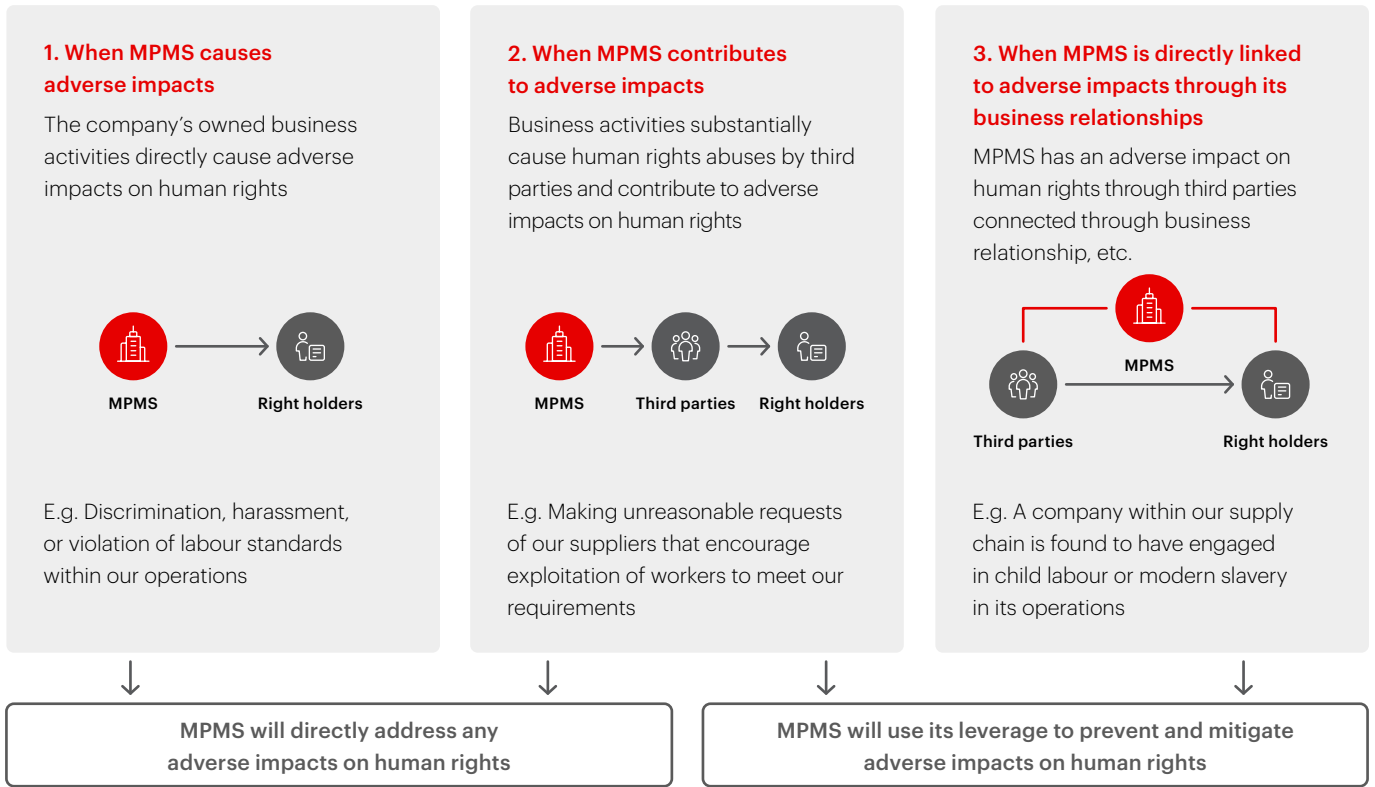

MPMS has identified a number of potential human rights risks within our operations and supply chain, and has put controls in place to manage these risks.

In any instance where MPMS has caused or contributed to adverse impacts on human rights, we will strive to remedy the situation through taking appropriate measures to mitigate or reverse these adverse impacts. If we have been directly linked to adverse impacts through business relationships, we will use appropriate leverage and influence to encourage our clients, suppliers, and others to prevent or mitigate these adverse impacts.

This is aligned with our understanding of the 'Continuum of Involvement' as outlined in the UNGPs.

Below are some examples of identified human rights risks within our operations and supply chain, and our response:

3. Our actions & progress

Highlights of this reporting period

Over the past 12 months MPMS has continued to improve its approach to modern slavery risk management. Key achievements since our last Modern Slavery Statement was published include:

Setting supplier expectations

Implementing our new Supplier Code of Conduct which sets out our environmental, social and governance standards and makes clear our expectations of our suppliers, including in relation to human rights and modern slavery. This was introduced for all new suppliers commencing in December 2025, and will be progressively rolled out for existing suppliers in 2026.

Improving training

Refreshing our modern slavery training module to ensure the content remains current, relevant, and tailored to MPMS's business operations and risk profile.

Strengthening policy

Reviewing and updating our Human Rights Policy to reflect MPMS's current approach to human rights and modern slavery, and more closely align with our parent company MUFG's approach to human rights risk assessment and management.

Equipping directors

Providing dedicated training for MPMS subsidiary entity Board directors to ensure that all directors across our global business were aware of their duties and obligations in relation to modern slavery, were equipped to manage modern slavery risks within their relevant entities, and had the appropriate controls and governance measures in place.

4.2 Supply chain

MPMS has relationships with more than 1,100 suppliers in 24 countries globally, with a 2025 supplier spend of approximately AUD$300 million.

The Group Procurement team oversees all major contract processes and supply chain management, and works with the Sustainability and Risk teams in managing supply chain risks, including modern slavery risks.

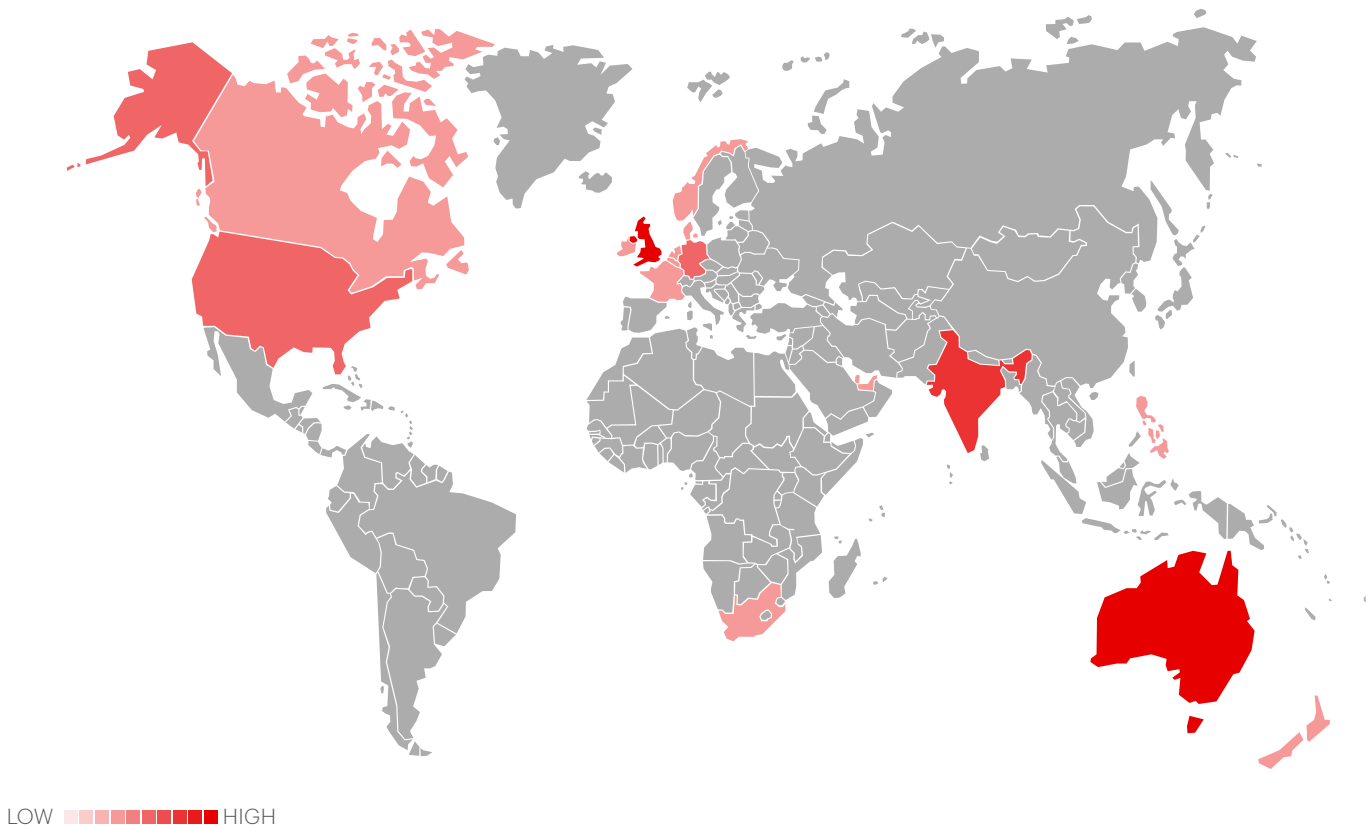

General procurement is decentralised across the business; however, all suppliers must go through our standard checks and onboarding processes regardless of value of spend. These processes and controls are overseen by the Procurement team.

As a technology-led service business, our largest procurement categories by ANZSIC Industry are Professional, Scientific and Technical Services; Rental, Hiring and Real Estate Services; Transport and Warehousing; and Information Media and Telecommunications. These four categories make up over 80% of our total spending.

Spend category	Description	Percentage of 2025 spend
Professional, scientific and technical services	More than half of all our procurement is in this category, including software and data services, cybersecurity, consulting, legal and accounting services.	57%
Rental, hiring and real estate services	Building management and leasing of our global network of office locations.	12%
Transport and warehousing	Postage and other delivery costs, mainly within our print and mail business.	9%
Information media and tele-communications	Internet and telecommunications services, including broadcast and streaming platforms.	5%
Others		17%

As an Australian-headquartered business, 76% of MPMS’s spend was with Australian suppliers in 2024. UK suppliers made up a further 13% of spend and Indian suppliers 5%, which is in line with our major regions of operation.

5. Policies and governance

5.1 Governance framework

MPMS recognises that a strong corporate governance culture underpins sustainable value creation for all our stakeholders. While the Board is ultimately responsible for implementing and overseeing an effective corporate governance framework, Executive Management and all our people are responsible for upholding the high corporate governance standards that we set.

5.2 MPMS Enterprise Risk Management Framework (ERMF)

MPMS's ERMF sets the strategic approach for managing risk by defining standards, objectives and responsibilities for all areas of MPMS. It supports MPMS Management in effectively managing its risks and developing our risk culture.

The ERMF sets out:

- Segregation of duties utilising a Three Lines of Defence (3Lod) Standard
- The identification, management and reporting of risks
- Risk Appetite requirements, which define the types and level of risk MPMS is willing to undertake in the pursuit of its business strategy, and
- Roles and responsibilities for managing risk and the accountabilities of the Executive Management, including business division Chief Executives and Corporate Centre heads, as well as MPMS Committees.

It describes our approach to managing the material risks our business faces. This helps the MPMS Board and management answer pertinent questions, including questions around the risks to our business strategy, our appetite relating to material risks, our approach to monitoring and managing these risks, and how we respond to possible scenarios that could impact MPMS.

Modern Slavery Risk is managed within the context of our ERMF and supporting policies and procedures.

5.3 Governance of human rights and modern slavery risk

The Board and senior management are accountable for ensuring human rights are protected at MPMS, and that human rights considerations are incorporated into strategic and operational decision-making.

The Sustainability Manager has responsibility for overseeing sustainability initiatives and leading the day-to-day implementation of MPMS's sustainability strategy, with oversight from the Chief Marketing Officer who reports to the CEO & MD. The Sustainability Manager chairs the Modern Slavery Working Group and leads modern slavery risk management initiatives across the business, as well as preparing briefing papers, reports and updates to the Board, Board Committees and Management Committees.

The Modern Slavery Working Group, comprising leaders of core functions including risk, procurement, technology and finance, supports the Sustainability Manager to identify modern slavery risks and coordinate a response and controls as needed within their business units and functions. It oversees modern slavery risk management initiatives, reviews and assesses the effectiveness of our actions, and manages communication with relevant internal and external stakeholders.

5.4 Identifying and assessing human rights and modern slavery risk

MPMS uses an integrated approach to human rights risk management, which is governed by the ERMF. We regularly review sustainability risks through our ERMF and risk policies to ensure our business can plan, mitigate and adapt to any pertinent ESG-related risks that may have a material impact on our value chain, business operations and people. This is chiefly led by the Sustainability Manager with support and oversight from the ESG Risk and Reporting Working Group and Modern Slavery Working Group.

Our risk assessment process for suppliers is outlined in Section 6.

5.5 Policies related to modern slavery risk management

MPMS has an established set of policies and procedures that govern its operations, which are updated at least every two years. The policies and procedures relate to our management of potential human rights-related issues regarding our employees, supply chain and business operations, and include but are not limited to:

Policy	Purpose and relation to modern slavery	Last reviewed

6. Risk assessment

6.1 Modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chain

Direct labour

Approximately 94% of all employees are directly employed by MPMS. Our employees are highly concentrated in our key markets, with 95% of all employees based in those locations. Around 47% of our employees are based in Australia, followed by India at 32% and the UK at 15%. Refer to the map on page 9 for a full breakdown of our employees by country.

As part of our standard recruitment processes, we undertake a range of checks to establish that our employees are legally allowed to work and have valid identity documents and/or visas for the location where they will be working. We do not employ children in any capacity within MPMS.

While India has been identified as a higher risk geography, the highly skilled nature of our workforce, nature of operations (service based with no manufacturing) and the employment practices we have in place reduce the underlying risk of modern slavery.

As such, we consider the risk of modern slavery and human trafficking in our directly employed workforce to be low and managed appropriately within our existing risk management framework.

Indirect labour

Periodically we engage external providers to supply us with workers to meet temporary peaks in demand. We also engage workers on casual, short-term or temporary contracts. These workers, like our direct employees, are skilled workers and represent a very small part of our overall operating workforce at 6%.

We do, however, recognise the elevated risks that come with employing external contractors, particularly in higher risk geographies such as India, and are taking steps to increase our due diligence with recruitment agencies and labour hire firms.

Additionally, in response to these risks, MPMS requires all employees to complete modern slavery risk training upon joining the organisation. This training must then be undertaken every year as part of Required Learning obligations, and the content is regularly refreshed to ensure it remains current.

The modern slavery risk training module has been developed specifically for MPMS and our own unique global footprint and risk profile, to help our people identify and report potential modern slavery risks or human rights abuses within our operations and supply chain.

Supply chain

As a large global business, our diverse supplier base of more than 1,100 suppliers is our most significant source of modern slavery risk.

Every six months MPMS undertakes a full modern slavery risk analysis of our global supply chain to identify our highest risk sectors, geographies and individual suppliers, and monitor changes in our overall risk profile. This process and methodology is detailed below.

These insights are then used to determine which of our suppliers we should engage to seek more information, undertake further research and due diligence, or monitor going forward to manage any modern slavery risk as it arises.

6.2 Risk assessment methodology

We engage an ESG data bureau, Purpose Bureau, to profile our suppliers based on their global slavery exposure rating and their labour and human rights action rating to create an overall modern slavery risk rating for each supplier and for our supplier base as a whole.

Purpose Bureau's methodology comprises:

-  Global slavery exposure (inherent risk)
A business's global slavery profile represents its theoretical exposure to modern slavery based on inherent characteristics.
-  Labour and human rights action (supplier's controls)
A Labour and Human Rights Action Rating is a measure of the suppliers' controls to mitigate or manage their modern slavery risk exposure.
-  Modern slavery risk (residual risk)
These two ratings combined inform the overall Modern Slavery Risk Rating, an assessment of the risk that a business poses to ethical labour and human rights.

This methodology enables us to focus our attention on those individual suppliers whose risk mitigation actions are not sufficient to manage their inherent risk, rather than on whole categories of suppliers in high-risk sectors and geographies. In turn, this allows us to be more targeted in our approach and engage more deeply with those suppliers identified through the process.

6.3 Key findings from supply chain risk analysis

In total, 1,111 suppliers were able to be included in our 2025 analysis, after excluding suppliers for whom there was no available information. This represents more than 98% of our total procurement spend.

Global slavery exposure

The global slavery exposure rating is determined supplier-specific insights to assess each supplier's inherent exposure to modern slavery risks based on factors such as country, industry, and supply chain characteristics. These indicators draw on internationally recognised labour rights frameworks and datasets, including those developed by the ILO and global modern slavery risk indices.

A global slavery exposure rating was assigned to each MPMS supplier based on the above indicators. The global slavery exposure rating is a four-tiered system from 'Very Low' to 'High'.

Only 9% of MPMS's suppliers by spend were rated as having High inherent exposure to modern slavery in 2025.

Human rights action

This is an assessment of a supplier's controls to mitigate or manage their modern slavery risk exposure, including verified certifications, accreditations, transparency disclosures, and recognised third-party audits. This is again rated on a four-tiered system with from 'Very Low' to 'High' ratings.

In 2025 more than 60% of MPMS's suppliers by spend take high action on labour and human rights, while 97% of suppliers by spend have at a minimum some governance controls in place.

Modern slavery risk

By combining inherent exposure with controls indicators, MPMS develops a supplier-specific view of residual risk. Prioritisation reflects the severity and scale of potential harm to workers and affected communities, directing further review and engagement toward suppliers where risks are most material and least mitigated. This methodology aligns with internationally recognised human rights due diligence principles, including the UNGPs.

In 2025 only 4.2% of MPMS's suppliers by spend have a High residual risk rating, while almost 90% have a Low or Very Low rating.

7. Actions to address modern slavery risks

7.1 Our key controls

MPMS has a number of controls in place to mitigate our modern slavery risk, which we are continually seeking to strengthen and improve.

Control	Description
Modern slavery awareness training	We require all MPMS employees to complete a bespoke modern slavery e-Learning module upon joining the organisation, and every year thereafter as part of their mandatory learning obligations. The training addresses both operational and supply chain risk, and emphasises the responsibility of all employees to manage modern slavery risk within their sphere of influence.
Recruitment due diligence	Our standard recruitment process includes identification and right to work checks for all prospective employees.
Supplier due diligence and onboarding process	All new suppliers, regardless of size or risk profile, must sign a modern slavery declaration before they can be onboarded.
Modern slavery clause in standard contractual terms	Our standard contract terms with our suppliers include a dedicated modern slavery clause which requires that the supplier and its subcontractors comply with the MPMS Human Rights Policy. This includes adherence to all applicable anti-slavery and human trafficking laws, statutes, regulations, and codes.
Supplier Code of Conduct	Our Supplier Code of Conduct was implemented for new suppliers in late 2025, and will be progressively rolled out to all suppliers from 2026 onwards. It sets out the minimum standards that we expect of our suppliers in areas such as modern slavery, labour and human rights, bribery and corruption, among other environmental, social and governance principles. We expect that suppliers, in their provision of goods and services to MPMS: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • will agree to the Code; • will be responsible for ensuring that their employees, representatives and sub-contractors understand the Code; • will ensure that their employees, representatives and sub-contractors adhere to the obligations set out in the Code.
Supplier data enhancement via purpose bureau	Suppliers who have been identified through Purpose Bureau's analysis as having high modern slavery risk rating and lacking appropriate controls can be flagged for data enhancement. This involves seeking additional information and evidence of adequate modern slavery risk management and compliance with our Supplier Code of Conduct.

7.2 Risk Events and remediation process

Employee reporting of risk events

Our Speak Up! framework outlines multiple ways for an employee to raise a concern – from a failed internal process, suspected misrepresentation, discrimination, harassment or bullying, through to customer complaints, illegal misconduct, or concerns about modern slavery risk within our business or supply chain.

Every MPMS employee is required to report and escalate risk events in a timely manner and in accordance with the MPMS Risk Event Management Policy. Employees are encouraged to speak to their manager in the first instance, or if they prefer, they can speak to a member of the Risk and Compliance team or a member of the Executive Leadership Team.

Risk events can also be reported using the Whistleblower Policy, which aims to promote transparent disclosure of any unethical or illegal conduct, including human rights and modern slavery risks or risk events.

Supplier reporting of risk events

We expect that suppliers will have a process in place for their employees and contractors to raise concerns or queries. Where a concern is raised, the expectation is that it will be investigated promptly, thoroughly and if necessary, anonymously.

We also encourage suppliers and their employees, contractors or agents to contact us directly with any concerns in relation to human rights and modern slavery, whether in relation to the conduct of MPMS and its representatives, or conduct within their own organisation.

Reports can also be made anonymously by employees or suppliers through FairCall, an external and independent provider contracted by MPMS to receive disclosures impartially and confidentially.

Remediation process

The Whistleblower Policy outlines how disclosures of reportable conduct will be assessed by Whistleblowing Protection Officers (WPO) as to whether further investigation is appropriate. The matter will then be referred to a designated Whistleblower Investigation Officer (WIO) for investigation.

Where a formal investigation is initiated, this will be an objective, fair, independent, thorough, and confidential process, without bias, conducted by the WIO. Investigations will be independent of the business unit in respect of which allegations have been made, the Whistleblower, or any person who is the subject of the reportable conduct.

Where investigations substantiate an allegation arising from the disclosure of reportable conduct, the matter will be dealt with in accordance with established administrative or disciplinary procedures, which may result in disciplinary action, including termination of employment or engagement.

8. Measuring effectiveness

MPMS seeks to measure the effectiveness of our modern slavery risk management program on an annual basis, or in line with our Statement reporting period. This allows time for training, changes in internal policies and procedures, and direct engagement with suppliers, to take effect and be reflected in the results.

Some individual measures, like our Risk Appetite Statement, are measured each quarter.

8.1 Risk monitoring and measurement

Risk appetite and regular risk reporting mechanisms

Our Group Risk Appetite Statement (RAS) provides a frame of reference for risk taking across MPMS, providing clarity around types and quantum of risk that the Board is willing to accept in pursuit of our strategy.

All material risks identified in the Group RAS have associated risk measures, which are set to be as objective and measurable as possible and can be regularly tracked and reported. ESG and Reputational Risk is one of 12 defined risk categories, which includes modern slavery risk as one of our primary ESG risks.

Our modern slavery risk measure is our ability to identify and respond to instances of modern slavery or Human Rights Policy breaches within our operations or supply chain, using our regular monitoring and risk assessment processes. Each quarter this measure receives a green, amber or red rating, based on defined thresholds. Throughout this reporting period, our modern slavery RAS measure has been green.

Supply chain portfolio risk analysis

As discussed in Section 6, we undertake regular risk analysis of our entire supply chain, seeking to understand our overall modern slavery risk. This portfolio analysis can be measured and tracked over time, indicating an increase or decrease in risk across our supply chain.

Our overall portfolio risk is similar in 2025 compared with 2024, with a slight decrease in total suppliers by spend with a high inherent risk, and the same percentage of suppliers by spend having a high residual risk at just 4.2%.

We will continue to monitor our portfolio risk every six months, accounting for changes in the breakdown of our spend across categories and geographies, and seeking to reduce the number of new suppliers being onboarded while also engaging any existing suppliers within our global supply chain.

8.2 Evaluation of training

MPMS requires all employees to undertake mandatory modern slavery awareness training to ensure our people understand modern slavery risks within our operations and supply chain and can identify potential indicators of modern slavery within their work environment.

The Sustainability Manager reviews this annually, with the training module most recently refreshed in 2025 with support from a leading human rights consultancy, updating data and case studies and aligning the content with MPMS's salient human rights issues and likely modern slavery scenarios.

The training also involves an evaluation survey to assess the effectiveness of the module and seek feedback. Employees rated the statements on a scale of 1-5, with 1 indicating 'Strongly disagree' and 5 indicating 'Strongly agree'.

The results of the survey are as follows, from 5,020 responses across 2025:

Questions	Average scores out of 5
I am confident that I can apply what I have learned	4.34
I would recommend this course to my colleagues	4.12
The content was relevant to me and to my role	4.08
The course content was easy to understand	4.38
Overall evaluation total	4.38

This is a positive result, and an improvement on our 2024 results, indicating that the training provided is relevant, easy to understand and apply in practice.

9. Future commitments

MPMS is committed to continually improving and strengthening our approach to managing modern slavery risk across our global business. There are several key initiatives either already underway or planned for 2026, including:
